

Take Your Anesthesia Group from Good to Great with Our Consulting Services

Alex Gorecki, Vice President of Marketing and Business Development, Clinical Colleagues, Inc.

More often than not, hospital leaders tell me that their anesthesia providers are good, but mediocre leadership or operational inefficiency seems to be an ongoing struggle. These are the challenges that often prevent the anesthesia service from reaching its full potential – from transitioning into a department that is truly great. It's not that the anesthesia group is intentionally being difficult; in fact, it's quite the contrary. The providers are working hard, but sometimes they simply “don't know what they don't know.” That's when your hospital can benefit from professional anesthesia consulting services.

Clinical Colleagues, Inc. (CCI) routinely serves as an independent third party to help hospitals and anesthesia groups identify mutual areas of consensus and implement strategies to improve the clinical, financial and operational performance of anesthesia services. Whether a hospital needs assistance with contract negotiations, the development of standardized performance metrics tools, or a comprehensive assessment of the current anesthesia practice management model, we provide professional consultative services to steer organizations in the right direction. And our approach is not theoretical. Since our company manages anesthesia practices nationwide, we bring firsthand knowledge of how to successfully implement patient-centric, cost-effective, service-focused business models. The end result is a better revenue-producing anesthesia department that centers around optimized clinical quality and customer satisfaction.

When hospitals want to keep their “good” anesthesia team in place but need to create a “great” service model, CCI's anesthesia consulting services can provide direction. The consulting option can create a win-win scenario for both the hospital and the anesthesia group..
